02 Self-deception is, in many ways, the drug of our day.

03 "Self-deception is rooted in the self-deceiver's disordered love for oneself. In short, self-deception stems from inordinate self-love. We love ourselves improperly when we do not derive our value from its true source—God—but from some other source. We deceive ourselves because we know and reject the truth. Therefore, to be free from self-deception, we must love the truth, which means we must love God above all things. When our loves are properly ordered toward God, we become our true selves, free from self-deception."
